

Questions & Answers

Question 1:

It says in the competition program that: "The entries should be A3 prints in an envelope or wrapped in a paper cover (fold up or rolled)." Does this mean that the A3-prints should be folded to a A4 size envelope or rolled in a paper cover? What if you want to return the entry without folding or rolling the paper cover? Is it possible to return the entry in a A3-sized envelope without folding the paper or wrapped in a bigger paper cover without rolling?

Answer:

The size of the envelope/paper cover is not defined. You can return the A3-sheet entry in A3-size envelope (not fold up), covered in a bigger paper cover, or folded in a smaller paper cover. The most important thing is that the entry stays inside the paper cover, is marked with an alias and has a smaller envelope in it with the contact information of the author. If the entry is returned to the AYY's mailbox (outside opening hours) the size of the envelope/paper cover should be considered so that it can fit to the mailbox.

Question 2:

The competition organizer is AYY but there are also two other parties (TF & KY) in the project. How is the follow-up of the competition organized regarding the two other parties?

Answer:

The winner proposals can be used in the follow-up planning, especially as a display material to visualize the project. The winner entries are used as a design tool especially for AYY's facility concepts. If the other parties' (KY & TF) facilities are presented in the winner entries, they will not be used in the follow-up planning, unless the two parties are behind the concepts. The competition jury can use the help of the two other parties as a consultation in the evaluation process.
